

14 Aug 2012

The Advantages of Creativity!

It's common amongst the creative people to feel hyper-anxious, get emotional and feel lonely and underestimated in the eyes of rest of the world. But relax; the scene is not as bad as you think it is. There are many advantages and special privileges of being creative.

Here are five great reasons to lift-up your mood and make you happy if you've lately not been much excited about your creativity...

Freedom of Entertainment

When you are really creative, almost whole world and everything within it becomes a canvas for your thoughts. You have the ability to alter and distort anything that can be visualized. It's really easy to make your own world, away from reality and switch between them whenever you wish. For this reason, you'll always have something or the other to keep you and people around you, away from boredom. You can have fun, explore and even learn a lot from your personal mental laboratory by taking the visualizations to the extent of reality. For this very reason, creative people are also usually good at practical humour and make a great company.

Influencing & Manipulation

Though creativity directly doesn't have anything to do with influencing or manipulation; however, it is relatively much easier for you to carry out the task, when you have it in you. This is because of the strong visualization ability, which enables you to be prepared for the possible problems that can arise while convincing someone. Moreover; creativity also makes a larger playground for the thoughts and possibilities that can be used to carry out while executing tasks. The scope of creating interesting and complex situations also increases, which helps in keeping others amazed while communicating. This ultimately increases the chances of people getting influenced by what you say.

Faster Growth & Better Career Options

Whichever field you belong to, there is always a scope of something extra and innovative. This tends to easily keep you in the good books of your higher authorities. Moreover the ability to think out of the box and solving problems also increases your chances of getting promoted to higher posts; making the career graph sharper. This also keeps you more engaged in even the most tedious jobs, as you manage to find out interesting and innovative ways of doing even the obvious tasks as well. As such when all other criteria are common, creativity is anyways, an added advantage.

Little Extra Consideration

When critical times come, the creative guys are often given an extra consideration. Creativity is overall a rare ability, because of which, the creative people are usually dealt in a more delicate and careful manner. This is also because; creative people are relatively more emotional and sensitive towards reviews and criticism. As a result there are lesser chances of creative people getting a rude or instant reaction for anything. This definitely doesn't, in any way imply that people love you; it's just that you might be too precious to be lost for some silly issues.

The Alien Effect

This is relatively a lesser common benefit of being creativity, as there are more chances that this works against you. When people around you know that you are creative, they somehow manage to consider you of some different age, era or even planet at times. This mostly results into avoidance and other problems. But after making a name in your respective field, the same 'avoiders' quickly turn into 'fan-friends'. However, sometimes the alien effect is pretty beneficial as you get your desired space and privacy under the 'alien' tag. The 'fear of unknown' also helps in keeping others from trying to mess around with you and ultimately proves to be an advantage!

